

TOMORROW'S CLASSROOM

COURSE TITLE:

Tomorrow's Classroom (AIAABC10522)

COURSE DESCRIPTION:

Travel through history to review the major education movements to arrive at the knowledge revolution of the present day. In this revolution, we see that students are dealing with more complex thinking and receiving education from many different sources, both in the classroom and out. This session will take a look at the needs of future education spaces, highlighting aspects like flexibility, mobility, and creativity of classroom furniture. Presenters will discuss the classroom of tomorrow, one where the learning environment has different functions, changing as students progress through their educational journey.

LEARNING OBJECTIVES:

- » Understand the history of cultural change and impact on knowledge acquisition.
- » Review how technology has driven the cultural change from a linear to a non-linear thinking and hybrid thinking society.
- » Define four learning environments that promote student engagement and ownership of learning.
- » Identify learning spaces that can meet the needs of learners and teaching strategies today and tomorrow.
